

Caregiver Stress Zones

A caregiver's environment plays a large role in the ability to provide the best patient care

AUTHOR(S)

Jennie Evans, BS, RN

Debajyoti Pati, PhD, FIIA

ABSTRACT:

Ever since studies emphasized the high-stress environment in which nurses' work, the scientific community has arduously examined potential stressors and ways to improve caregiver work conditions in healthcare settings.

Of particular importance was (and is) the realization that stress can impact human performance and, hence, patient care quality, efficiency and safety. Staff stress is associated with two principal sources that continuously interact in a complex fashion - stressors originating from operational, cultural and organizational factors and stressors originating from physical environment factors.

FOR COMPLETE ARTICLE PLEASE FOLLOW THE LINK BELOW TO HERD JOURNAL

Link:

<http://nursing.advanceweb.com/Editorial/Search/SearchResult.aspx?KW=Caregiver+Stress+Zones>

FOR A PERSONAL COPY OF THIS ARTICLE PLEASE CONTACT:

Debajyoti Pati at dpati@hksinc.com

Jennie Evans at jevans@hksinc.com

t 214.969.3320

www.cadreResearch.org

Email: dpati@cadrereseach.org